EXPERIENCE THE JOYS OF LIFE LONG LEARNING!

The City of Vacaville's Community Services Department will again offer a new class in the Science for Seniors series. This new class, Principles of Xeriscaping, will explore the process of gardening using less water. Soil permeability, water retention, plant choice and positioning will all be covered using demonstrations, graphs and activities. This topic is especially important as Northern California's water supply may be reduced due to protection of endangered species. This class will start Monday, October 8th from 10 am to 12 pm at the McBride Center and will continue weekly until October 29th. Adults 50 and older may register at any Community Center or on-line www.cityofvacaville.com. The class will again be lead by Beverly Morlock, Community Services staff and Solano Community College Adjunct Faculty. The cost for this class is $30 and includes all supplies and information. For more information call 469-6674.
